Fish hook tying video

A four-in-one tool, the SF Fly Fishing Zinger Knot Tying Tool combines the functions of an oval and circular retractor, measuring a tape zinger, and a nipper. This knot binding tool is built with durable stainless steel, which is very lightweight and comfortable – assisting all your knot binding needs. It also acts as a line knot selector, hook sharpener, jig eye cleaner and line clipper. SF Fly Fishing Zinger Knot Pairing Chair features are kept in a D-ring and attached to a retractable zinger to keep each in place. ProsMulti-purpose toolGood quality and finishingCons optimized for fly fishing SF Fly Fishing Zinger Knot Tying Tool EZ Knot Tyer is not fishing swiss knife, but it certainly looks like one. If you ever feel that you want a multipurposed compound tool that can bind a fishing knot like starters, then you've come to the right place. First, let me just praise the quality of this product. True, it most likely isn't the best, but that metallic matte/non-reflective finish with all its color variants just makes it look fantastic. I know it's not part of what you'd appreciate for the knot-binding tool, but I feel like it's still worth mentioning. Now, main course. There are four main tools for this node binding tool. Apart from the knot bandage, of course, there's a hook sharpener, hook eye cleaner, and line cutter. Due to the good quality, construction and finishing of the metal used for the product, all these tools work admirably. Something simple like a hand-pressed cutter can be effectively used to accurately cut your lines where you need it. Heck, the side-swinging 1.57-inch hook sharpener doesn't even feel like it should work. But strangely, it is. Just warn me. This particular product is designed for fly fishing. If you are going to use this knot tying tool for a somewhat lighter longline, it could work, but we won't guarantee because I've never tested it for that purpose. But if you're going to use the SF Fly Fishing Zinger Knot Pairing Tool EZ Knot Tyer for fly fishing, then this is a tool for you. Better it's not, but it's more than enough to suit your line of needs. Buy Mono Now! Buy Braid Now! Buy Fluoro Now! Below is a great video posted by Encyclopedia Of Popular Knots that shows you 5 different types of node that you can use to bind your fishing hook. * This video is great for showing you how to tie a knot, but it's actually wrong with some so here are the names of the node person is tying 1) Loop Node 2) Palomar Knot) Better Clinch K not4) Uni Knot5) Jammed Snell KnotBelow we went out and found the best video on the web every above node just in case you wanted to get a little more thorough on that knot. 1.) Loop the knot to connect your HookOk so the noose knot in the video above is not the same knot as the noose node shown below, but we thought you should probably look at this type of loop knot as well. Salt Fishing assembled and an excellent video on how to tie the noose knot. The advantages of this loop knot is that the loop gives your hook more lead, which can lead to more action on your decoy or even live bait. Other names in this node are Non-Slip Loop Knot or Kreh Loop Knot, I hope you enjoyed the loop knot salt strong fishing above. However, the noose node that the video at the top of the talk is more of a concept that, when you create a loop, this term can be used to make several types of platforms, however, this node is most commonly used in a chicken rig using a drip node. The video below posted on How to Fish on Youtube shows you how to make a drip knot. 2) Palomar Knot included in your hook Below is another great video posted by How to Fish on Youtube, which is a little more visual (thanks to a huge hook and yellow chord) on how to tie the Palomar Knot. 3) Better clinch knot to add to your HookAded clinch knot is probably one of the most popular knots to add to the hook just because it's super easy to tie. There is a very low learning curve for this node. Below is a video posted to Youtube by the Salt Water Experience that shows you how to tie an improved clinch knot. This video is very well filmed with clear footage, has step-by-step directions, and uses a black background with a pink chord that really stands out and allows you to see the knot binding steps. 4) Sleep Knot Fixing Your Hook If you've read other articles here in the Bullbuster community, you know it's probably our teams' favorite knot. Below is a video posted by Darcizzle Offshore on Youtube that shows you how to use a uni knot to tie the hook. 5) How to tie your hook with Snell Knot Below is an excellent video posted on Youtube by WhyKnot that shows you how to tie a snell knot. Hook tying is an important and important fishing skill. Ask any avid fisherman out there and they will tell you that on the darkest day they can't remember when fishing was when their day's best catch got away because of a weak knot or faulty equipment. Knowing how to bind a fishing hook will help you avoid joining the list of those who have been caught and lost. This writing focuses on some simple all-inclusive Best fishing knots that fit in different situations. How to bind fishing hook line1. The Palomar Knot Palomar knot is over 95% strength mainly because it is a double-run through the hook of the eye and node. This is a favorite knot for many anglers. i Double times 6 inch line (over yourself). Then pass the folded line through the eye with a decoy or hook.ii Tie a simple overhand knot with a little eye hook, effectively leaving a few inches end of the label. (Avoid twisting lines).iii Pull the end of the loop down and move it completely over the hook.iv Moisten the line and pull both ends of the draw knot. (Trim any excess). The Palomar knot is believed to be the best knot for a light longline because it tends to maintain a lot of initial line strength. The improved Clinch Node makes five turns before the loop. This makes it one of the strongest methods to bind the hook especially given that it retains 95% of the original line strength.i. Move one end of the line through the hook eye or rotating (leave about 6-12 inches in line).ii. Leave a small space between the line and the hook, and then turn the tag-tip around the standing line 5-7 times.iii. Take the tag end and pass through this small space left between the line and hook eye.iv. Thread at the end of the tag through another loop (as created in step 3 above).v. Pull the tag end and standing the line slowly away from hook.vi. Finally, moisten the lines with water and pull the standing line firmly away from the hook.3. Hangman's Knot (Uni Knot) This knot is quite popular especially monofilament. In addition, it works quite well when you connect the eye-contact to leader.i. Pass the line through the hook eye and double back to form circle.ii. Tie the knot wrapping tag end around a double line making six times and put out loop.iii. Moisten the line with saliva or water and pull the main line to tighten the knot.iv. Pull the main line again to slide the knot to the hook's eye (or rotate).v. Finally trim the tag end and fill the knot. Don't worry about cutting the end of this knot. It's going to hold. The good thing about hanging a knot is that it's great to learn and it works very well with a braided line.4. Non Slip Mono Knot This type of knot is also known as the Kreh Loop because it was popularized by Lefty Kreh - a fishing legend. As the name suggests, it forms a tight loop at the end of the fishing line. A non-slip knot is best with larger lines, where a tight knot can prevent the hook movement.i. Create an overhand knot about 10 inches from the end. Thread tag will eventually carry a hook to the eye and then double back so that it passes through an overhand loop.ii. Then wrap the tag end over the overhand around the line about five times.iii. Move the line back through the overhand once more (entering from the same side he exited).iv. Moisten the lines and pull slowly to unassemble the wraps.v. Pull the noose and the upright line in the opposite direction to sit in the knot (trim ends).5. Shovel End KnotIf you are looking for a shovel hook you will notice that it is not in the eye. For this reason, you need to tie the knot next to the bent end of the stem. Usually the hooks are small and the knot tends to keep them completely in place.i.Create a loop line over the hook bend so that you can then grip the loop with a bend on the thumb and short end of the line 10 times around the hook stem. This can be done either by bending the shovel or by bending the shovel down. The first is much easier master.ii.Swap your grip to reveal the loop and bend. Then move the free line to finally through that loop.iv.Pull the free end of the line and the main line in the opposite direction to tighten the knot. Moisten the line a little before final tightening. (You can crop loose ends). Note: It is important to ensure that the line is always hooked over the front of the shovel.6. Snell Knot Another way to bind a fishing hook involves creating a snell (which in other words means creating a knot away from the hook eye). This simple strategy works well with any fishing assignment because it increases the strength of the equipment and improves catch rates especially higher fish.i. Starting with an upturned eye hook, move the line through the eye to create a large loop going along the stem. (Make sure that the tag tip is along the stem).ii. Wrap the tag tip over the hook stem and the line works (running from point to point moving eye). Do this repeatedly to make 5-10 wraps and then finally feed the tag to finally through the loop moving from the bottom to the top. (Note: The number of windings depends on the size of the line and hook).iii. Hold the wraps in place and pull the tag-tip carefully to grab it. Cross-check to ensure the wraps are nicely formed and clean before finally pulling both ends very tight. Finally, clip the tag end. Final WordFor Best fishing node – Practice, practice, practice is a keyword if you want to learn how to bind the fishing hook. Always make sure that you are able to tie a secure node every time you head outside. Remember, the weakest link angler and prey is not a reel, line or rod. It's a knot connecting the line to the hook. Hook.
